

More Than a Small Town Printer

Good Shepherd Printing Receives “Excellence in Civic Engagement Award”

Good Shepherd Printing, founded in 1992 by Jeff Fannin, recently won the “Excellence in Civic Engagement Award for Community Business.” Fannin, owner and lifelong Morehead resident, accepted the award at Morehead State University’s recent Constitution Days. The Morehead-Rowan County Chamber of Commerce and the MSU Center for Regional Engagement sponsored the awards.

Good Shepherd Printing goes above and beyond their call of duty through community service. This includes giving local non-profit organizations a discount on printing.

Jeff Fannin says, “Our goal is to assist other organizations who are trying to help those less fortunate.”

Fannin is not only a businessman but is also active in the community. Fannin is involved with various outreach activities and serves as a pastor at his church where he participates in mission work. He is also a family man. He and his wife recently adopted twin girls.

“Ministry and non-profits are where my heart is,” says Fannin.

Betty Cutts nominated Good Shepherd Printing for the award. Cutts is founder and president of Blessing Hands, a non-profit organization dedicated to providing educational opportunities and support around the world. Cutts got to know Jeff Fannin while working with Morehead Sister Cities.

Cutts said, “We shared a common interest in China and orphaned children.”

Fannin has helped Cutts and her organization in many ways. Cutts described Fannin as the “community pastor and the energizer bunny.”

Cutts said, “He has a good heart and wants everyone to prosper not just himself. Good Shepherd Printing employees are also kind and helpful. They welcome you with a friendly face and offer great service.”

Good Shepherd Printing is a growing business. They just changed locations to West Main Street. Their clients include Morton Salt and the Cincinnati Bengals. This doesn't stop them however, from serving Morehead and helping locally where they are needed. Good Shepherd Printing is an asset to the community and will hold true to their mission for years to come.

